

Student Commons

Today's students want a range of spaces to support the many ways they learn. As a multipurpose environment for relaxing, socializing, discussing ideas or studying alone with others nearby, a Student Commons helps students develop personally and stay engaged in the experience of learning.

Student Commons
Study Spaces

Seating options encourage students to choose where they work best, and a variety of settings encourages students and faculty to interact informally, extending the reach of the classroom.

Seating options encourage students to move around and change postures, a healthy practice for bodies and brains.

Individual settings with screens manage distractions while keeping students connected to the energy of a group setting.

Whether on task or relaxing, students appreciate views to outside and a range of settings to choose from.